

LALS Brown Bag

In 2006, the response to government repression of a teacher's strike was a popular revolt that took over the city of Oaxaca for six months. The groups that made up the Popular Assembly of the Peoples of Oaxaca were united by their desire to depose the governor. This talk examines how the emerging spatial practices produced by the marches, assemblies, street art, and barricades in Oaxaca transcended the people's desire to oust the governor and produced embodied models of social transformation that became their own point of reference.

Bring your Brown Bag lunch & we will provide the beverages. For more info call LALS at 312.996.2445
This event is free and open to the general public.

UIC Latin American and
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS AT CHICAGO Latino Studies Program
COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS & SCIENCES